When it comes to serving the community, even Baylor College of Medicine trustees get involved. Recently, one Board member took the idea of championing a cause to a new level. Trustee and Vice Chair of the Board of Trustees David Baldwin organized and led a 3,500-mile cross-country bicycle ride to raise awareness and money for The Center, a Houston-based not-for-profit organization committed to improving the lives of adults with intellectual and developmental disABILITIES.

The team rode from Portland, Ore., to Rehoboth Beach, Del., June 6 to Aug. 3, receiving help along the way from Baylor alumni and trainees, and a Baylor faculty member served as Chief Medical Advisor. In the end, they raised more than $12.7 million, providing crucial funds for this important community organization. To learn more about their journey, visit pursuitride.org.

Look in the Medical and Science section every Monday and visit bcm.edu to see how Baylor is achieving the amazing in our community.