Since moving to Houston in 1943, Baylor College of Medicine has been giving back to its community. Over time, that community has expanded to become global and the services provided have multiplied. But throughout our history, our commitment has been strong to provide excellent training for physicians, scientists and health care professionals; to focus on scientific research that ultimately will benefit people; and to offer the highest level of both basic and complex medical care, across all populations.

In the year 2016, we could not be prouder of the people behind all these efforts. At Baylor College of Medicine, each student, trainee, faculty and staff member contributes to our mission. And those individual and collaborative efforts make our community a better place.

Look in the Medical and Science section every Monday and visit bcm.edu to see how Baylor is achieving the amazing in our community.
