ACHIEVING THE AMAZING

Baylor College of Medicine

An education at Baylor College of Medicine goes beyond patient care and applied research. At Baylor, trainees also learn the importance of lifelong service and using their skills to serve the community.

CPR training outreach is just one of the many ways Baylor learners collaborate to bring this spirit of service to life. Sections of Houston were identified that had a higher ratio of out-of-hospital cardiac arrest compared to the number of CPR providers. Baylor medical trainees went to those neighborhoods to teach free mass CPR classes in outpatient clinics. In three years, 90 volunteers have trained more than 720 Houstonians. That’s 720 more members of our community ready to save a life.

Look in the Medical and Science section every Monday and visit bcm.edu to see how Baylor is achieving the amazing in our community.